Soloist:

Take down the tree pack up 16,000 decorations throw out the trash. I don't mean the visiting relations wrap up the food enough for 12 more weeks of turkey dishes, and tell the kids that leftovers are always quite delicious.

Kids: Always

Soloist: Yes, always

Kids: Really always

Soloist: Well, almost always

All: Those leftovers are really almost always quite delicious!

Soloist: But there's much more to do the after Christmas sales are on. I have to get there early. Ignore the fact it's crowded and the clerks a little Curly return the clothes that were my style and couldn't fit me better.

Kids: And while you're at it, please take back your ugly Christmas sweater.

All: Oh, I ate too much. I've spent too much. I really overdid it. I should have no one that I'd overcome with Christmas spirit. I should have guessed I get no rest when Christmas day is through cause the day after Christmas, I still have too much to do.

Soloist: Replace the batteries in fruit the robot poodle repair the broken toys. They sure don't make him like they used to, but one thing will outlast these Christmas toys all put together the payments on my credit cards go on and on forever.

Kids: Forever

Soloist: Yes, forever

Kids: Really forever

Soloist: That's right forever

All: The payments on those credit cards go on and on forever

Soloist: But there's much more to do

Kids(inturpt): Go skating sledding skiing make the most of every minute if there's a snow drift to be found he'll probably find us in it. The mall the movies play date. What a whirlwind of vacation.

Soloist: I'm totally exhausted from providing transportation

All: Oh, I ate too much. I spent too much. I really overdid it. I should have no one that I'd be overcome with Christmas spirit. I should have guessed I'd get no rest when Christmas Day goes through because the day after Christmas, I still have too much to do on the day after Christmas .

Soloist: It's busier than ever no relaxing whatsoever not for me, though. I believe that even Santa Claus gets reprieve. I need a break for heaven sake, but who can take a holiday. Ive

All: got to get ready for New Year's Eve!
